FOURSOME PLAY,

A foursome is really the most geniul him ask you for advice; never offer it. form of golf. It is not to be thought that four ball matches are advocated. The Americans have dubbed these Scotch foursomes. Now playing four of two, is a wearisome process, and four player must be pretty equal Moreover, unless in big Exhibition wise much occupied, there would be no players going to work. It is of the grand old foursome that we are to purity, before record-breaking, handi capping, pot-hunting and conconitant evils were dreamt of; to cast off the a close foursome. There is a partner-2153 absorbingly selfish element and to re. skip in the excitement as in the play, store the social, noble, honourable and living rapture with which old Suthermanly game, we must urge golfers to land described the halving of a keen go in more for foursome play.

'In the fifties' and 'sixties'-when gelf was at its best-scoring was confin ed to two days in the year with the Royal and Ancient Golf Club at St. Andrew's. Yet, strangely, the mere securing of the medal by strokes was never dwelt upon. It was a necessary evil, at the time the only means of of what his partner is best able to do bringing out the medal holder, (not the best player) for the two meetings. But nobody remembered it for a month. variable custom at St. Andrews, in the days of old, to play nothing but four somes, except when actually playing for the medal. There were no invitation competitions, no handicaps (except a farce handicap on the medal day, which nobody but the winner with eighteen strokes remembered), no prizes in the shape of cups. It was the 'Medal | play above his game. He is astonished Week, but big foursomes ruled every every day except the scoring Wednes-

One rejoices to look over the minutes of some old golf Clubs which arranged Lot has an area of 64 222 square feet, for foursomes. The Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers possess records and medals for a century and half. The Club, in the days o' auld lang syne' would meet at dinner some six times during the season. After dinner, the match-book would be produced, and sundry foursome would be St. Andrew's Links in the 'fifties,' more arranged and recorded therein, with any mild bets that excitement and interest played for two consecutive days five called up. These matches had to be played off before the next match dinner, when the results were officially declared, and the bets melted. By this system of foursomes members got to know the play of all grades.

IN PRAISE OF FOURSOMES. When golf ceases to be a social game, when its rewards are specially it dividual, when medals take the place of hopest pleasure, the game is doomed A great philosopher-Lessing-said that he would prefer the pleasure of the con- three and a half the second, or 113 holes. tinued and progressive search after truth itself. In a somewhat similar, way, comparing great things with small, that lives in one's memory so long as golf there is really, to the true golfer, more satisfaction, more cheering heartsomeness, in the social development of four some play in its integrity, than in the 2161 individual glory for the time being of having secured a Championship. the latter, pride is fostered, and conceit is apt to make a player cynical; in the former man's nature expands into genial fellowship, true brotherhood is engendered as in no other from of the game, THE following Particulars and Conditions of SALE of CROWN LAND by and health-invigorating energy is given ILEAL FARTNERSHIPS. But it is not long before a good player can select for his partner one who will be a joy to him in the game. The most pleasant foursomes are where a firstballs, the best of two against the best class and a second-class player are on each side. There was no better partner to a strong player than the late Mr John Blackwood, editor of 'Maga.' He know he was not a crack player; for, matches, where the Links are not other- though steady, he could never drive well with his twisted swing. But he had the rare power of holing putte regularplace for them, as so much time is ly of six to eight feet. The moral necessarily taken up by even four good effect of these putts was paralysing to his opponents, and his partner knew it was in him to do it at the time needed. He played as a real whist partner, not for his own glory, but to To bring back golf to its pristine win the match. His enthusiasm knew no bounds; the cares of 'Maga' never sat on his shoulders all the round. For enthusiasm there is nothing like One can never forget the real burst of match: And we would have lost it, but by the d-dest providence Blackwood holed the last put! The beauty of genuine foursome play lies in this, that a man's individuality is absorbed in the common cause. He must 1 of take a liberty or risk anything without his partner's consent. He has to calculate where to drive his ball, not as if he had to play the second -the important shot of the hole, but thinking and what will suit him best. There must be mutual counsel and encouragement. Eyon the first-class player is not beyond receiving at times small meed In fact, it used to be almost the in- of praise for a good shot. But a bad player for a partner is sometimes very exacting; he considers that you ought never to make a mistake It is a matter of common observation - on paper difficult to account forthat a good, steady, second-class player and a first-class player will-hole the round in nearly as few-strokes as the first-class player can do, playing his own ball. The inferior golfer, when he has confidence in his partner, will always at it; yet it is a fact. And nothing will improve his general play so much as a series of such foursomes. He is in the best of moods, and he will not cease talking over the match; and he goes at it with a birr next untell. A FAHOUS FOURSOME. One famous match of this kind may be here mentioned, as a good case in point. Mr Tom Peter, a second class. player, and the great golfer, Allan Robertson, played against Mr O'Brien

Peter, and the best general representative of the game all over yet seen, Tom Morris. This foursome was played on frequently than any other foursome be-fore or since. On one occasion they rounds each day; and the match ended in a draw. When they finished, Allan said he had never had sie a belly fou o' gowf a' his days. So enthusiastic were they that they would play on at the short boles, with lanterns set at the holes to guide the putt!! The late Mr. James Balfour Melville (father of the ex-Amateur Champion) recorded a most exciting foursome played at St. Andrew's in 1803, between Mr. George Condic and Major Boothby against Mr. Thomas Hodge and himself. All were medal holders, and were at the top of their game. They played for two days three rounds the first day and in all, and at the end of the 112th they were all even ! But Condic and Bootliby gained the last hole. A match like can be thought of. A foursome that created a good dealof interest at the time arose from a challenge which appeared in the Field newspaper, from the Mouldsworths, father and son, to play any other father and son in the country, the match to be three rounds of St. Andrew's Links Mr. Balfour-Welville and his son accepted the challenge. The match was played in 1874, in presence of a large gallery; and the Balfours had the satisfaction of beating the English players by seven The greatest historical gelf foursome was played in 1849, between Allan Robertson and Tom Morris against the brothers Willie and Jamie Dunn, for £400. The match was 36 holes on each of the greens of St. Andrew's, Musselburgh, and North Berwick. The Dunnies' thrashed the St. Andrews men at Musselburgh, but got beaten at St. Andrews. It would be impossible to find in the whole annals of golf a more perfect illustration of the advantages of pluck and perseverance than in the deciding match at North Berwick. The early part of the match went greatly in favour of the Dunns, whose play was magnificent. At length they got four up and eight to play. But how fickle is the game! Allan and Tom recovered, and by a magnificent spurt, gained the first hole then the second, halved the third, gained the fourth, halved the fifth, and gained the sixth, thus making the poll all even, and two to play. These two holes Allan and Tom won, thus obtaining the glorious match. The more one thinks of the fine old matches, the more he is impressed with the much more social, kindly, and humour-inspiring power that there is in a foursome than in a single. As for mere scoring, we would as soon see a man playing alone with his scoring card, occasionally taking a second chance when a short putt is missed. Let us have more of stirring foursomes to counteract the evils which are dragging down the enthusiasm, the brightness, and the humanity of the best of games!

HONGKONG, WEBNESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 190. THERE came into our possession last week two very interesting documents One is a reprint of a despatch by Hi-Excellency Sir Henry Blake to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and is supplementary to the despatch sent to Mr Chamberlain on the 13th of July litst, dealing with the plague epidemie in Hongkong. This latest despatel contains two excerpts from reports by Mr James Mansergh, the Sanitary Engineer, on the surface drainage system of Colombo (1898), and the surface drainage system of Melbourne (1890) His Excellency makes no comment on these excerpts beyond the remark-in will be seen that surface drainage has its dangers and disadvantages.' Following the example of His Excellency, we shall not attempt to hazard an opinion on a subject that requires expert knowledge, and content ourselves by recommending a perusal of Mr Mansergh's reports by the advocates of the opendrainage system His Excellency's despatch also contains an article which appeared in the Times of India on the 21st September last. This article deals with the recent plague epideraic in Hongkong, and sets up comparisons between Bombay and Hongkong, showing how mildly Hongkong escaped when compared with Bombay, What His Excellency's purpose is in reproducing this article it is easy to guess, the more so as the following is an early passage in it :- The citizens of Hong. Dealers; WATKINS Ltd., General Agents, kong appear to regard these returns as constituting sufficient reason for making agonized appeals to the Secretary of Excellency's hands are tied by the State for the Colonies concerning the system of government that obtains in local Administration. If Hongkong had been compelled to endure the far worse experience of Bombay and other Indian cities, its public men would probably have learnt to accept its misfortunes more calmly.' Which shows that the Times of India does not quite grasp the purpose of the public petition referred to. The conduct of the public of Hongkong throughout successive plague epidemies, we renture to assert, has been characterised by a calmness and restraint equal to anything we have learned of in any community of Europeans in India. It was not so much the recurrence of plague epidemics which paralysed the trade of the port that induced the public to petition Mr Chamberlain, but the slowness of the local Administration to introduce reforms. which, it was thought, would not only mitigate the virulence of the plague but have a permanent effect upon the conditions under which we live in Hongkong. Our Indian contemporary admits. that while the incidence of disease was not so heavy in Hongkong as in Bombay, the death-rate was appreciably higher, also that 'the last Hongkong epidemic presented a feature for which no parallel can be found in India. six weeks, in the not very large European community, twenty-five persons were attacked and nine died.' Our contemporary also says, By no stretch of the imagination can Hougkong be described as sanitary; but, having made this admission, our contemporary seems to consider that memorandum of Mr Stewart Lockhart and his two official colleagues, 'clearly demonstrating that at any rate Mr. Chadwick's recommendations, have been carried out. sufficient to allay all popular demand for reform. We might say a good deal more about The Times of India article; but no good purpose would be served in doing so. The conditions in Hongkong are different from those in India, we take it that in India there is more continuity of method in the Administration, and, we hope, more statesmanlike grasp of the situation than we have experienced in Hongkong-and so the advice of the Times of India to abandon, 'petitions' and 'representations and leave the work of fighting the plague in the hands of Government and CONCERT. A very pleasant little concert was given last evening, in the Dining Room of the Peak Hotel, by Madame Agnes Freed, to an appreciative although sparse audience. This lady's contributions consisted of Still Vio Die Nacht' and, as a contrast, 'Take me, Jamie Bear, in both of which she was heard to advantage, her clear enunciation and expression coming to the fore: Later in the programme, her interpretation of 'Daddy' was pashetic, and 'Ave Marin,' as a concludrendered, and she also gave during the evening Mabel Bourne-Goens' Berceuse' (memorised), and the same composur's Scherzo; both these pieces gave opportunity for dis-play of graceful bowing, and stamp her as violinists of namean order. A suspicion but was, apparently, quickly overcome, and it is to be hoped that Hongkong will have many opportunities of hearing this lady. -Mrs A.R. Fullarton was heard to advantage in 'Dear Heart (Tito Mattei) and in the encore, When our world was young' although one could have wished for a little more clearness in the second effort. Me Danenberg contributed, as an opening solo, Chopin's Scherzo in B Minor the opening of the hall. Having secured, however, thesomewhat uncertain attention of this part of the audience, it is to his credit that he was chabled to keep it fixed in his subsequent numbers in the second part, which consisted of Liszt's Rhapsodie No. 6, and. as an encore, -well deserved-Chopin's 'Impromptu' an effort which brought out his technique to advantage. The above is a photograph, which is both occurred some two months since: the of Apology to the German Emperor. They spent a few days there before finally embarking for Europe. In the centre of the group sits the young Prince, brother to the Chinese Emperor, who is said to reface and figure. He is flanked on the one side by Sir Henry Arthur Blake, and members of the Chinese Mission stand in a row, to the left and right of their nominal leader. At the extreme end, on the lefthand side, is Captain Pakenham, R.N., commanding H.M.S. 'Daphne,' at Hong. | C. M. kong. The remainder of the group is made up of the household of the Governor, and one or two notables of the place. Miss Blake, who is an attractive young lady, sits near her parents.

The costumes of the members of the mission, apart from that of the young Prince, may strike the casual observer as somewhat peculiar: in fact, they are the ancient State costume, which is derived from a Tartar and not a Chinese source. Every Eaglish child who receives an ordinary education learns, or has learnt, that the present Imperial Family of China is of and Empresses, in consequence, have large influence which the wives and mothers of various Emperors of China have exercised over the government of a country where women are usually despised and kept in

For this offence, he was immediately degraded, and even imprisoned for a short time, as he was told that he should have remained with the rest of the fleet and sunk with his unfortunate companions, rather than leave the spot to which his admiral had ordered him without freshorders from headquarters. His sentence was afterwards mitigated, as he was given an important civil appointment which he still holds; but he will never be allowed to have any further connection with the Chinese Navy. After all, the East and the West are not so far apart in some matters. Perhaps red-tape, like printing and gunpowder, was first invented in

Hongkong is by no means a pleasant place of residence, nor a very salubrious one; but this latter failing might be greatly modified, if the wealthy inhabitants of the city would spend a certain amount of money in cleansing the streets making sanitary arrangements, and preventing, as they easily could, the overcrowding of the poorer quarters. Instead of this, when, as at present, an epidemic of plague visits the town, they content themselves with upbraiding the unfortunate Governor, whoever he, may be, and refusing, at the same time to give him any assistance in rendering the place habitable and healthy. Most of the richer portion of the community, and all the better class of Europeans, live in the surrounding country : i.e., the suburbs the city; and are, therefore, personally comparatively unaffected by the extreme unhealthiness which decimates the poorer part of the population. Probably, the chie cause of this outbreak of the plague, and certainly the reason of its continuity, has been the existence of the millions of rats which infest Hong-Kong. If drastic measures were employed to destroy, or, at anyrate, greatly to decrease this vernin, enormous benefit would accrue; but this is no easy matter, and would require the hearty co-operation of the inhabitants. The climate of the island is, nearly the whole year round, of the dampest, warmest, and most depressing character. Someone

RESIGNATION OF REV. R. F COBBOLD.

The ' Notes' of St. John's Cathedral for the current month contains the following letter from the Rev. R. F. Cobbeld, Chaplain, to the Church Body :-

Hongkong, 27th November, 1901. TO THE CHURCH BODY OF SAINT JOHN'S CATHEDRAL. My Lord and Gentlemen,-I have the honour of acquainting you with the fact that I have this day returned from my holiday, having been absent nine months and two weeks, and that I am propared now to take over from Mr Johnson the responsibilities of my position. It is, however, within your knowledge. that on the 3rd of October last I cabled from England to the Bishop of Victoria that I intended on my return to Hongkong to ask permission to resign the post of Chaplain of Saint John's Cathedral which I have held during the past nine years and Agreeably with that message, -I, having to-day arrived, now beg to place in your hands my resignation; and to state that should like it to take effect on the Sist of March next, or as soon as a new appointment can be made before that date. It may not be considered strictly accurate to use the term 'resignation' since my last agreement expired in 1898, and was never formally renewed. Still, as it seems to have been tacitly understood on both sides that the appointment held good for a longer period, the word practically expresses my

My reason for now asking you to appoint a new Chaplain in my stead is mainly of private nature and I need not particularise it in detail; but chiefly it is that I may, by residence in England, fulfil what I consider may be so, I am promised the offer of an appointment at home if I am there to accept it when a vacancy occurs.

I, therefore, wish to return to England as soon as possible; and I venture to hope that you will make an appointment here at an early date. If it should be before the 31st of March I should relinquish my post as soon as such appointment be made; and in that event I shall be clad, if it be thought necessary in order to defray the cost of-a new Chaplain's passage from England, to repay the amount which will have been, according to promise, paid to me out of the Cathedral Fund for my recent passage to

Although the prospect of residence-in Eugland is, naturally, a pleasing one, it leave Hongkong; and I shall indeed be sorry to sever my connection with the work honour to be called to do it. There have been, I know, many shortcomings on my bart, but I hope the o may be forgotten, id that I have at least not failed to properly appreciate the consistent kindness which the Church Body has hitherto always

With the earnest wish that you may guided by the Spirit of Wisdom in the exercise of your responsibility to our fellowworshippers here, and select the right man -a man full of zeal and power. I am, my Lord and Gentleman, Your obedient Ser-
